

Andrew Jackson to Francis Preston Blair, February 26, 1837, from Correspondence of Andrew Jackson. Edited by John Spencer Bassett.

TO FRANCIS P. BLAIR.

Private

Washington, February 26, 1837.

The President with his respects to F.P. Blair Esqr. requests him to prepare a short answer to the inclosed. I have a head ache that renders me incompetant to night and it ought to be sent tomorrow. These are the working class who feed us; and if neglected would not be well pleased. send it early tomorrow morning, written not in cyper, but so that it can be read.¹
